Now, if you're familiar with PianoGroove's solo piano tutorial for this song - based on Bill Evans's voiceovers - you'll know this simple melody can be dressed up to 9s. If you're looking for that elegant beautiful jazz arrangement, you'll find it here at PianoGroove. Check out the relevant lessons below. But that's not the direction we're going in this video. Instead we want to pear down voiceover to its roots - it was created in 1934 by John Frederick Coultts and Haven Gillespie. Then the harmonic arrangements were not as sophisticated as they are today. Great for kids and adults alike! The availability of Santa Claus Comin To Town makes it a large number for sing-long with friends and family. Both adults and children love this song! As a pianist you have to make it as easy as possible for everyone to join the festive cheers. Once everyone sings along to you, you will keep everything together through your harmony and rhythm. When you lead a group of singers, it is important that you are flexible to guide and follow them at the same time. Especially since the merry-go-rounds of the group could go in any direction. Simplified arrangement We are going to stay in the same vein as the solo piano version, inspired by Bill Evans. However, for this singalong, we are going to simplify the chords and changes. We'll start by playing through the form with simple triads, then go back to the melody with the 7th chords and discuss the harmonic movement. Just 1 verse to work with something to keep in mind that this song has only 1 verse, but if you have a crowd going, then you don't want to stop just one time until the end, so I'm done with this melody singing 2 x through the straight, usually the second time all comfortable and fun with it more than the first time, although the words are the same! Then I solo through 1 time, you can also bring in elements from another arrangement or play that arrangement before returning to sing-long.
